RUSHVILLE WILL GET NEW FACTORY

Success of Industrial Movement is Assured Since 100 Lots Have Been Sold.

TO TURN THOUGHTS TO WORK

Drawing Will be Held in Court House
Assembly Room Latter Part of This Week.

Rushville is to have its new $50,- 000 furniture factory, thanks to the members of the Rushville Retail Merchants Association, the local men who are behind the industrial movement and the men who so willingly came forward and bought lots to make the proposition a success.

The new factory was practically assured Saturday, but it is cinched
now. There is nothing more to be done except arranging the final details of the lot sale and preparing for the erection of the new factory building. It is estimated this afternoon that at least one hundred lots had
been sold.

Just as soon as the lot sale is finished, the drawing has been held and all of the arrangements have been made as agreed in the contract, the promoters of the new factory will turn their thoughts to the things which is the sole cause for the industrial upheaval in Rushville. They will begin to plan for the new factory, which will be modern in every detail. The men who are in the company will visit several cities in Indiana and the Middle West where furniture factories have been erected recently. They will get ideas which they expect to use in their plant.

Already members of the company have formulated a few plans for their new factory although nothing definite has been arranged. They expect to build themachinerom only one story high and with a saw-tooth roof so that the light will be very good. They expect to erect a three story finishing room, which will be modern and sanitary. According to the present plans, each machine will have a separate motor.

The success with which the lot sale
has progressed has been a revelation to the promoters of the factory, the business men and, in fact, to every resident of Rushville. It was only last Friday that the proposition was first offered to Rushville through the newspapers.

Before the papers went to press
that evening forty lots had been sold and it seemed imminent then that the sale would be a success. Saturday
it was announced that the required number would be sold and by Saturday night about ninety had been disposed of. The sellers reached ninety-five this morning and this afternoon it was estimated that at least one hundred had been bought. The sale was continued all day and as long as there were buyers, business men and the promoters were willing to sell.

The lot drawing will be an auspicious part of the proceedings. It will be held either Thursday or Friday night in the court house assembly room, when each person who has contracted for a lot will know which one he is to receive. If the plat can be made by Thursday night and the lots numbered the drawing will be held at that time.

The factory promoters have agreed to plat the ground off into lots and streets. The streets will be graded, according to the agreement and two trees will be set out on every lot.

Fair in south; snow in north portion tonight. Much colder tonight.

losis Sunday," April 30, says the Indianapolis News. The movement is national in scope, fostered by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. Governor Marshall has been asked to issue
a proclamation calling for a general observance of the day throughout the State.

portunity to attend the sessions.

ATTACKS FATHER WITH BIG KNIFE

Frank Miller of St. Paul Murderously
Assaults and Probably Fatally Wounds Parent.

HAD QUARREL OVER MONEY

Son Disappears and Police All Over
This Section Are Notified to be on Lookout.

Frank Miller of St. Paul, 35 years old, believed to be insane, who has been placed in prominence recently by his strange actions, attempted to kill his father, Louis Miller, 65 years old, a rural mail carrier out of St.
Paul, at the Miller home in St. Paul last night about six o'clock. The two men were the only ones in the house
when the murderous attack was made by the son with a large butcher knife after a quarrel. The victim is believed to be in a very serious condition and may be fatally hurt.

After the near patricide, Miller stepped into another room, changed clothes and went out on the street.
When the details of the horrible assault were known, citizens attempted to locate Miller, but their efforts were futile. The local police as well as the authorities in all of the towns and cities in this section of the State have been notified to be on the lookout for the insane man.

According to today's edition of the Shelbyville News, the trouble between the father and son started when the son was refused a sum of money which he demanded. The two were sitting in the kitchen at their home at the time and when the father quietly informed the son he had no money to give him the young man seized a knife from the table and hacked
and slashed his aged parent fearfully about the head, neck and face. When the helpless victim of the unexpected assault sank unconscious to the floor,
his assailant, not content with what he had accomplished with the murderous knife, seized a big crock from the table and smashed it to bits in beating the fallen man over the head.

The facts regarding the outrage
were gleaned from the wounded man during intervals of consciousness after he had been found by friends. After the awful attack young Miller quietly stepped into another room and exchanged his bloody clothes for another suit and then walked down town and mingled with his fellows as though nothing had occurred out of the ordinary.

The scene of horror at the Miller residence is supposed to have been enacted about 6 o'clock. Shortly before 8 o'clock young Miller appeared at the I. & C. station and friends of the man who talked with him at the time noticed nothing out of the ordinary in his manner of speech. He is somewhat unbalanced mentally but his condition has never been regarded as serious enough to warrant confinement. His father had always been able to manage him and had ever been ready to care for the boy on account of his affliction and to provide for him during periods when he would be out of money on account of refusal to work or inability to secure employment.

The irresponsible condition of the son's mind is shown in an incident that occurred at the traction station and which led to the discovery of the terrible plight in which the aged man had been left. But for this Mr. Miller would most likely have reached death at his home before help reached him as no one had heard the quarrel.
Bert Palmerton, who is Mr. Miller's substitute carrier, was about to

TAKES FORGER THROUGH HERE

Special Agent From Michigan City Returns Paroled Man to Prison.

WAS ARRESTED IN SHELBY

Has Been in Penitentiary Twice Before on Same Charge--At Large a Week.

Special Agent Laurimore from the Indiana State prison at Michigan
City, passed through here this morning with Robert Cherry from Shelby-ville, on his way to return him to prison. Cherry, who is a former inmate of the State prison has violated his parole and must now serve his full sentence. Laurimore resides in Muncie and has all of the paroled
convicts in this section of the State
under his charge.

Cherry is said to be a bad man.
He has been sentenced to prison two times for check forgery, which trouble caused his return today. Cherry has been wanted in Shelby county for the last week for fleeing Charles Flaitz, a meat dealer of Shelbyville,
out of ten dollars with a check,
which purported to have been issued by Thomas Tillison.

Cherry was captured at Fairland, Shelby county, Saturday by the sheriff of Shelby county and lodged in jail. Word was sent to the prison authorities at once and Laurimore arrived in Shelbyville early this morning to take Cherry back to prison.

Cherry was released on parole only four weeks ago and was soon into trouble. The last time he was sent up for forging a check for ten dollars

school was in this city Saturday, communicating with the local school management regarding a field meet to be held between the two schools, says
the Connersville Examiner. New Castle sent no representative, but it is probable that they will enter the contest later on. It was arranged that the meet be held on May 13, at ent events of the contest will be published later.

MRS SPENCER IS DECIDED SUCCESS

Former Local Young Woman Pleases
as Soloist For Indianapolis Orchestra in Murat Concert.

WAS RECALLED BY APPLAUSE

A crowd that more than filled the large auditorium of the Shubert Murat theater in Indianapolis yesterday afternoon heard the second concert of the new Indianapolis orchestra, with Mrs. Arnold Spencer, formerly Miss Ruth Tevis, daughter of the Rev. V. W. Tevis of this city, appeared as soloist. Mrs. Spencer's work was a pronounced success, as is apparent from the following in the Indianapolis Star this morning:

Mrs. Spencer's two charming songs added much to the program.
Her voice has abundant color and lends itself in a satisfying way to melodies such as she sang yesterday.
Her two songs, Bemberg's "Nymphs
and Fauns" and Ronald's "Summer" were flawless and were accorded a merited applause. Mrs. Spencer's singing has added attraction in her pleasing presence, which captivates
immediately and gives to her songs
an increased delight. When Mrs.
Spencer had concluded the second of her group yesterday she was recalled and responded with Dudley Buck's "Hey, Laddie Lark." Mrs.
Spencer's accompaniments were played by Orville Coppock.

SPICELAND HAS A $3,000 BLAZE

Co-Operative Telephone Building is Burned Saturday Night and Other Structures Are Damaged.

The one-story frame building occupied by the Spiceland Co-Operative Telephone company with its exchange
was destroyed by fire Saturday night,
entailing a loss of about $3,000, partially covered by insurance. The fire originated from a defective chimney
and the building was a mass of flames
before the citizens discovered it.
Miss Ruby Pickett, operator in charge, was overcome with fright,
and had to be carried from the burning building. The home of Mrs. Cora Hawkins, north of the burned building, was damaged and two houses across the street caught fire, but were not damaged to any great extent.

FARMERS GREET RAINS OF SUNDAY

Wheat Crop Was in Bad Condition and Needed Moisture, So the Farmers Assert.

GROUND BAKED AND CRACKED

Winds Which Have Blown Steadily
This Month Have Served to Make That Condition.

Nothing was ever greeted with more joy by the farmers of Rush
county than the rain of Saturday night and Sunday as the wheat was getting into such a condition that moisture was needed or the crop might have been badly damaged. The rain was sufficient to save the crop for this year, so it is asserted by prominent farmers of Rush county.

During the last week the young grain has been looking very downcast
and farmers generally were surprised that it withstood the continued drouth
so long. The wind has been strong most of the time during the rainless period and has only served to dry and crack the ground on the surface.
Farmers say that the thaws have not been hard enough to penetrate the ground very far and that the soil just under the surface is still frozen and does not allow any moisture to come up from the bottom to the roots of the cereal.

The view of fields which persons get while traveling through the county is apparently deceptive. The reports have been that the wheat crop was in a very good condition, but a closer inspection showed that the winds which have been blowing steadily all month have only served to bake
the ground and put it in such a condition that would allow the cereal to prosper. It is believed that the rain of yesterday will furnish enough moisture to save the wheat crop and make it one of the best in recent years if it survives other dangers that may yet arise.

It is said that some oats has already been planted in Rush county this spring. Due to the excellent weather of the last few weeks farmers have been imbued with the early crop idea and have tried to make use of it.

TALKS ON "EFFICIENCY"

Here Speaks to High School.

Prof. A. F. Stewart, former professor of mathematics in the local dents this morning. He had for the topic of his talk, "Efficiency." The former teacher urged efficiency on the part of the high school pupils who,

he said, will make up the future generation, which in order to make the United States the greatest nation in the world, must be efficient.

ACCIDENT VICTIM BETTER.

SAYS EDDY BEQUEST OBTAINED BY DECEIT

Charges Against Trustees of C. S. Church.

Concord, N. H., March 27.—That Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science church, was "systematically deceived and led to bequeath the whole of her property to said church in ignorance of the fact that so great a bequest was forbidden by the laws of both New Hampshire and Massachusetts," was the charge made in an additional bill in equity filed in the superior court by George W. Glover against the trustees of the First Church of Christ Scientist of Boston.

Glover charges also that he "was deceived and entered into an agreement not to contest the will of his mother, the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, without suspecting that an illegal disposition of the property was in contemplation."

NO TIME WAS LOST

Negro Murderer Quickly Disposed of by Virginia Mob.

Bluefield, W. Va., March 27.—John Henry Morgan, a negro, who two hours before shot and instantly killed Grover Lambert, a contractor for the Walton Construction company, at Cedar Bluff, Va. was lynched in broad daylight and his body riddled by bullets.

After the murder the negro was captured after a pursuit of several miles by a posse of ten men. A rope was secured from a farmhouse close by and no time was lost in placing it around the negro's neck. He was given two minutes in which to say his prayers, and at the signal of the leader of the crowd he was pulled into the air by the men. The end of the rope was then tied to the tree and the mob left for their homes, leaving the negro dangling. None of the lynchers is known.

Lambert was killed when he attempted to overpower Morgan, who was wanted for drawing a gun on H. P. Harmon, a contractor. The lynching occurred about six miles from the West Virginia state line.

Lambert was a married man, but had no children.

MORBID CROWD VIEWS BODIES

Thousands Look On Victims of Factory Fire.

CARELESS SMOKER BLAMED

Fire Chief Croker is of Opinion That Blaze in Shirtwaist Factory Which Caused the Death of 145 Operatives Was Due to a Match Headlessly Thrown by Cigarette Smoker—Horrid Scenes at Holocaust.

New York, March 27.—Until dawn Sunday morning searchlights on fire apparatus played into the holes that once were windows of the Asch building at Washington place and Greene street, and throughout the day firemen searched the ruined shirtwaist factory floors until darkness came again, and later. The firemen found three more bodies Sunday, which brought the number of dead up to 145.

During the early morning hours firemen felt around in the water under a hole in the sidewalk's vault lights of Greene street, a hole made by falling bodies, but discovered nothing. One of them happened to look upward and found two bodies of young women beneath which he and his companion had walked many times since daylight. The two dead girls were lying on a lattice of steam pipes about four feet below the hole in the vault lights. Their bodies had broken the concrete and glass vault lights of the pavement and had fallen through the sidewalk hole to the steam pipes.

Smoker Blamed For Holocaust.

Twelve hours later firemen working in the cellar of the building came across a body at the foot of the shaft of the two freight elevators on the north side of the building. It was so badly burned and mutilated that the firemen were unable to tell whether it was a man or a woman. An arm and shoulder were found near the north end of the cutting room of the eighth floor, where the fire started, beneath a pile of wet plaster and bits of warped sewing machines. A hand was found on the window ledge of the fifth floor on the Greene street side, evidently broken from the wrist of a falling body. Two charred arms and a burned foot were found on the ninth floor.

The windows of the burned floors begin so close to the floor that the sills are a few inches below the knees of one standing beside the window. It was evident that many girls, therefore, whether they wanted to jump or not, must have been shoved out of the windows by the press behind them.

Max Black, one of the proprietors of the Triangle company, told the reporters that it was against orders to smoke in their lofts. The reporters while clambering over the debris on the eighth floor at the place where the fire started, saw amid the half-burned pocketbooks, shoes and bits of clothing a scorched cigarette box. In another part of the building were a number of half-smoked cigarettes lying on the floor. Around some of the bodies of the men who jumped and in the pockets of their clothes were quantities of matches. Chief Croker said that he believed the fire was caused by a smoker, who tossed either a match or a lighted cigarette on the floor among the piles of inflammable flimsy stuff used in the making of waists and lingerie.

Morbid Curiosity of Crowd.

Except in the cases where the bodies had been burned until they were merely shriveled black masses, the heads of the dead were propped up in uncovered coffins, so that identification might be made easier. At one time in the earlier hours people passed onto the pier at the rate of 100 a minute.

The relatives or close friends who were looking for their dead at the pier morgue began to come an hour or two after the first body arrived there, and they were still in line at dawn. Early Sunday morning the line of people waiting a chance to look at the victims of the fire stretched from the pier entrance back on Twenty-sixth street, a long block to First avenue and then south on First avenue to Twenty-fourth street. With few exceptions those who arrived from the late forenoon on were curiosity seekers who know no one who worked in the burned building. There were frock-coated young men carrying canes, who laughed and chatted with well-dressed girls as the line jostled slowly eastward toward the pier entrance—young couples who had read the morning papers before starting for their Sunday stroll, and who wished to see the dead out of curiosity. And there were many of these girls who entered the shedded pier laughing who after a moment of looking at the horrors, fell in a faint to the floor.

They Have Faith in Him.

New York, March 27.—A mass meeting of negroes in honor of Dr. Booker T. Washington was held at the Bethel church on West Twenty-fifth street Sunday afternoon. About 500 were present, and resolutions were unanimously adopted recognizing Dr. Washington's high character and service to his country and expressing unbounded and abiding faith in his integrity and honor.

IN THE MATTER OF DREAMS

Writer Rebels Against Universal Dictum That They Must Never Be Related.

In the house in which I was brought up, there was a rule that dreams should not be told at the breakfast table—a rule which, to my mind, robbed the meal of its only possible interest. I still remember an impression of the lawn massed with yellow lions which I desired particularly to share. The table was a large one, seating three generations, and I gained the idea it was on account of the prophetic character of the dreams of a certain great-aunt that the prohibition was so rigorously enforced. But I know better now. We were forbidden to tell our dreams because dreams—even more than the love of William Blake—"never may be told." They are among the incommunicable experiences. Just as a young painter is taught not to portray a luminary on canvas, so a child must be taught not to describe its dreams. Better relate the dulllest true story than the most thrilling dream. Is it that our audiences are so in love with reality? Is it that the isolation of a dream, which may neither be shared nor re-acted, leaves the listener's egotism cold? I do not know, but at the mere words, "I dreamt," you may see your auditor's attention dissolve—neither at his will nor your own—like mist before the sun.

Now, is not this strange, when you consider how deeply dreams color the days of even the sanest of us; how in dreams we commune with the dead, love strangers, marry our enemies, fight and die; have, in short, all the adventures of life in its most poignant moods? Yet not even our nearest and dearest will lend us their ears.

Do we merely need more art? Must we seek only some method to hold that dissolving attention until the full radiance of the vision can be sketched out? Or must we all improve in a sort of psychological imagination? Or is it, as I am inclined to think, that something inherent in the experience itself makes it remote, and that as we must die alone, so we must dream alone too?—From "Point of View," in Scribner's.

Killed Limit of Deer on One Shot.

In the recent deer hunting season in Michigan at least three Upper Peninsula men were successful in filling their licenses as the result of a single shot. Sheriff Turnbull of Luce county was one of these. Two deer were standing together. The sheriff fired at one, the ball passing through its body and killing the other animal also.

Paul Laabs, Sagola, Dickinson county, found two bucks engaged in a battle. A shot from Laab's rifle killed the spikehorn and the other was so weak from the loss of blood that it expired as soon as released.

Professor Hill, superintendent of schools at Crystal Falls, is the third man who bagged two deer with one shot. One of his trophies was a dead deer, however. The animals had been engaged in a battle, during which their antlers had become interlocked, and one of the combatants was dead. Professor Hill shot the living animal. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rather Good to Have Around.

Any kind of a woman in the office would be a nuisance, but a young woman who kept a powder box, a cold cream jar and a bottle of violet water on her desk among the typewriter supplies and copying ink was an utter impossibility that ought to be encouraged to look for a more congenial job, said the baker's dozen of men who have had their own way in that office for five years; but when, with the first freezing of the steam pipes corks stuck like glue to ink and mucilage bottles every time they happened to be corked up and the young woman came to the rescue by simply smearing some of her cold cream over every cork so it would stand in the bottle for a month without sticking, the men said maybe a woman who knew practical little hints like that wasn't such a bad person to have around after all.

NEW CABINET FACES
A DIFFICULT TASKCharged With Helping Diaz
Out of Hole.

Mexico City, March 27.—It is stated on good authority that President Diaz at once will announce the following cabinet: Minister of foreign affairs, Francisco De La Barra; minister of finance, Jose Y. Limantour; minister of justice, Demetrio Sodi; minister of fomento, Manuel Marroquin Y. Rivera; minister of public instruction, Vera Estanol; minister of communication, Norberto Dominguez; minister of war and navy, Gonzales Cosio.

Limantour and Cosio are the only members of the old cabinet to be retained in office.

It is officially announced that Vice President Corral will sail for Europe early in April. He will be succeeded as secretary of the interior, an office which he holds in addition to being vice president, by Governor Dehesa of the state of Vera Cruz. De La Barra will probably be succeeded as ambassador at Washington by Joaquin Casas or Manuel Cavarrubias, the present minister to England.

They Meant No Harm.

San Antonio, March 27.—According to the official report received by General Duncan, commander of the department of Texas, from Lieutenant W. R. Taylor, in command of the Third cavalry patrol at Presidio on the Mexican border, there is no evidence to show that a patrol of cavalrymen was fired upon by Mexican federal troops on Wednesday, at least not intentionally.

To Double Town's Population.

Kewanee, Ill., March 27.—Upon presentation of petitions from property owners and voters in the thickly settled additions on three sides of Kewanee, the city council has ordered a proposition to annex the territory, doubling the city's area and population, to be placed on the ballot at the election on April 18.

BARS THE CROOKS

Uncle Sam's Assay Office In Wall Street Not a "Fence."

ON THE WATCH FOR THIEVES.

Precautions Taken to Keep Jewelry and Gold and Silver Articles, That May Have Been Stolen, Out of the Government's Melting Pot.

The way in which the United States assay office in Wall street keeps itself from becoming a "fence" where thieves and crooks may bring their stolen wares to have them melted and receive cash for the same was recently explained by the superintendent.

The federal statutes make it difficult for those in charge to refuse any gold or silver handed in. The statute reads in part that "any owner of gold and silver bullion shall be entitled to deposit the same, and it shall be melted and assayed immediately." It does not designate that only the rightful owner may apply for service, and inasmuch as possession is nine points of the law of rightful ownership the assayer is not allowed to be a doubting Thomas.

"Several years ago," said the superintendent, "there was a city detective stationed in the building to watch for jewelry and gold and silver pieces that were presented for assaying to determine whether or not they were stolen goods. He remained here for eighteen months, and during that time he did not catch a single thief. The reason was that the news undoubtedly went out to every 'fence,' crook and thief of every description in the city that a guard was at the assay office and to watch out for him.

"After the city detective was withdrawn it became more necessary to secure some other means to prevent our offices from really becoming a 'fence' for stolen articles.

"The one provision we finally incorporated into our rules that has kept away from us the greatest portion of stolen goods that might otherwise be headed in our direction was that we refused to accept any bullion that will assay less than $100. In this way we are able to refuse any ordinary quantity of rings, watches and other trinkets that would be stolen and which we know will not contain pure metal to that amount. Of course sometimes we will accept stuff and it will turn out to be worth a few dollars under the amount, but we cannot always guess correctly when looking at goods.

"We have many other ways of determining whether goods presented to us have been stolen, but it would not be wise to let every crook in town know what they are. Sufficient to say that every time we have suspected things were not right we have secured immediate co-operation of the New York detective bureau, and I believe we have secured better results than when a man from the central office was constantly on watch. Then the stuff did not appear. Since then we have been of assistance in tracing down several burglar mysteries.

"When goods are stolen that value or would assay over $100 it is much easier for us to keep the lists of the same which are furnished by the police department and to be on the lookout for what is wanted.

"Then when the value of the articles is over that amount we are in much safer position to put a few questions to our customer, to discover who he is and why he wants to get money for the articles. If we are still suspicious that all is not as it should be it is a simple matter to make a few investigations before we complete the transaction.

"I am perfectly aware that the idea is prevalent in many quarters that the United States assay office is a 'fence' for thieves to bring their wares. This may have been the case in New York in the old days, and it may be so now in other places, but I feel that it is a pity that such feeling still exists in New York. It may be that there are cases where stolen articles get by us, but we are constantly on the lookout for crooks and what they have looted, and I feel safe in saying that there is less justice to the term 'fence' being applied to us now than at any other time in the history of the office."—New York World.

Bench and Bar.

Sir Edward Carson is noted for his ready Irish wit. On one occasion in court when the judge, with whom he had had more than one passage of arms, pointed out to him the discrepancy between the evidence of two of his witnesses, one a carpenter and the other a saloon keeper, he answered: "That's so, my lord. Yet another case of difference between bench and bar."—London M. A. P.

"Why, of course," snapped young Mrs. C. T., "it's our wedding tour. What on earth did you think it was?"

"Well, I'm beginning to think it's a lecture tour. Now cut it out, see?"—Toledo Blade.

Showered With Attention.

"Now that you are rich I suppose everybody is anxious to serve you." "That's the way it seems. I'm on the lookout all the time for subpoenas."—Kansas City Journal.

Bond brokers at Indianapolis are said to be laughing at the order of the State tax board to township assessors directing them to list for taxation all gravel road bonds issued prior to March 4, 1911. They declare the order can not be enforced, because the assessors can not find the bonds. It does seem unreasonable to require that such bonds should be listed for taxation, while those issued since March 4 are under the recently passed law exempt from taxation.

An exchange inquires as to whether it is possible the number of marriages of young ladies employed in public libraries within the last year may be the result of the romantic atmosphere of places in which books of fiction have the call to the extent of ninety per cent. Rushville people do not seem qualified to make good answer to this proposition, as the proper foundations for speculation have not struck the local field as yet. At all events there seems to be some material for thought in the inquiry.

Dr. B. G. Keeney, Shelbyville's health officer, called Dr. J. N. Hurty to Shelbyville to investigate the report that there is smallpox in Shelbyville. Four cases of the disease were found which had never been reported to the proper officials. They had been diagnosed as chickenpox.

New Castle Courier: At a meeting of the New Castle Liquor Dealers' Association, an organization of local citizens who plan to engage in the licensed liquor business, a new regulation was adopted in which it was agreed that each liquor dealer in the city should engage in that business only. The new rule means that there will be no pool or billiard parlors conducted in connection with the saloons.

FALSE ALARM.

Mrs. May W. Donnan's Saturday afternoon talk to her study class on the legend of the Holy Grail was one of the most interesting in the entire series of lessons on Legends in Literature. There was a comparative analysis of the version of Tennyson and that of Lowell, and Mrs. Donnan's own conception of the symbolism in the Tennyson poem was simple and exquisite.

In the preliminary half-hour Mrs. Donnan spoke of the work of Antonio Fogazzaro, whose death removes the greatest Italian novelist. The lectures to be given by Prof. Brander Mathews of Columbia University on the development of the drama, each lecture to be followed by a play illustrating the lecture, is one of the most important educational events in modern times concerning the drama. The advent of "Marie Claire" in English dress is nothing short of a literary event, as its original appearance in French was the sensation of the book-world of Paris. It is the autobiography—touched with the glow of imagination, of Marguerite Audoux, a seamstress of Paris. Mr. Arnold Bennett says in his introduction to the English translation, that the book is the "exquisite expression of a temperament." Mrs. Donnan's review of "Marie Claire" brought out the simple unconscious grace of the writer and showed that the translator had been thoroughly penetrated by the atmosphere of the book and had transferred it in a large measure to his own pages.

CHAPTER VIII.

Miss Thorne and Not Miss Thorne.

From a pleasant, wide-open bay-window of her apartments on the second floor, Miss Thorne looked out upon the avenue with inscrutable eyes. Behind the closely drawn shutters of another bay-window, farther down the avenue, on the corner, she knew a man named Hastings was hiding; she knew that for an hour or more he had been watching her as she wrote. In the other direction, in a house near the corner, another man named Blair was similarly ensconced, and he, too, had been watching as she wrote. There should be a third man, Johnson. Miss Thorne curiously studied the face of each passer-by, seeking therein something to remember.

She sat at the little mahogany desk and a note with the ink yet wet upon it lay face up before her. It was addressed to Signor Pietro Petrozinni in the district prison, and read:

"My Dear Friend:
"I have been waiting to write you with the hope that I could report Señor Alvarez out of danger, but his condition, I regret to say, remains unchanged. Shall I send an attorney to you? Would you like a book of any kind? Or some delicacy sent in from a restaurant? Can I be of any service to you in any way? If I can please drop me a line.

"Sincerely,
"ISABEL THORNE."

At last she rose and standing in the window read the note over, folded it, placed it in an envelope and sealed it. A maid came in answer to her ring, and there at the window, under the watchful eyes of Blair and Hastings—and, perhaps, Johnson—she handed the note to the maid with instructions to mail it immediately. Two minutes later she saw the maid go out along the avenue to a post-box on the corner.

Then she drew back into the shadow of the room, slipped on a dark-colored wrap, and, standing away from the window, safe beyond the reach of prying eyes, waited patiently for the postman. He appeared about five o'clock and simultaneously another man turned the corner near the post-box and spoke to him. Then, together, they disappeared from view around the corner.

"So that's Johnson, is it?" mused Miss Thorne, and she smiled a little. "Mr. Grimm certainly pays me the compliment of having me carefully watched."

A few minutes later she dropped into the seat at the desk again. The dark wrap had been thrown aside and Hastings and Blair from their hiding places could see her distinctly. After a while they saw her rise quickly, as an automobile turned into the avenue, and lean toward the window eagerly looking out. The car came to a standstill in front of the legation, and Mr. Cadwallader, an under-secretary of the British embassy, who was alone in the car, raised his cap. She nodded and smiled, then disappeared in the shadows of the room again.

Mr. Cadwallader went to the door, spoke to the servant there, then returned and busied himself about the car. Hastings and Blair watched intently both the door and the window for a long time; finally a closely veiled and muffled figure appeared at the bay-window, and waved a gloved hand at Mr. Cadwallader, who again lifted his cap. A minute later the veiled woman came out of the front door, shook hands with Mr. Cadwallader, and got in the car. He also climbed in, and the car moved slowly away.

Simultaneously the front door of the house on the corner, where Hastings had been hiding, and the front door of the house near the corner, where Blair had been hiding, opened and two heads peered out. As the car approached Hastings' hiding place he withdrew into the hallway; but Blair came out and hurried past the legation in the direction of the rapidly disappearing motor. Hastings joined him; they spoke together, then turned the corner.

It was about ten o'clock that night when Hastings reported to Mr. Campbell at his home.

"We followed the car in a rented automobile from the time it turned the corner, out through Alexandria, and along the old Baltimore Road into the city of Baltimore," he explained. "It was dark by the time we reached Alexandria, but we stuck to the car ahead, running without lights until we came in sight of Druid Hill Park, and then we had to show lights or be held up. We covered those forty miles going in less than two hours.

"After the car passed Druid Hill it slowed up a little, and ran off the turnpike into North Avenue, then into North Charles Street, and slowly along that as if they were looking for a number. At last it stopped and Miss Thorne got out and entered a house. She was gone for more than half an hour, leaving Mr. Cadwallader with the car. While she was gone I made some inquiries and learned that the house was occupied by a Mr. Thomas Q. Griswold. I don't know anything else about him; Blair may have learned something.

"Now comes the curious part of it," and Hastings looked a little sheepish. "When Miss Thorne came out of the house she was not Miss Thorne at all—she was Señora Inez Rodriguez, daughter of the Venezuelan minister. She wore the same clothing Miss Thorne had worn going, but her veil was lifted. Veiled and all muffled up one would have taken oath it was the same woman. She and Cadwallader are back in Washington now, or are coming. That's all, except Blair is still in Baltimore, awaiting orders. I caught the train from the Charles Street station and came back. Johnson, you know."

"Yes, I've seen Johnson," interrupted Campbell. "Are you absolutely positive that the woman you saw get into the automobile with Mr. Cadwallader was Miss Thorne?"

"Absolutely," replied Hastings without hesitation. "I saw her in her own room with her wraps on, then saw her come down and get into the car."

"That's all," said the chief. "Good-night."

For an hour or more he sat in a great, comfortable chair in the smoking-room of his own home, the guileless blue eyes vacant, staring, and spidery lines in the benevolent forehead.

On the morning of the second day following, Señor Rodriguez, the minister from Venezuela, reported to the Secret Service Bureau the disappearance of fifty-thousand dollars in gold from a safe in his private office at the legation.

CHAPTER IX.

Fifty Thousand Dollars.

Mr. Campbell was talking. "For several months past," he said, "the International Investment Company, through its representative, Mr. Cressy, has been secretly negotiating with Señor Rodriguez for certain asphalt properties in Venezuela. Three days ago these negotiations were successfully concluded, and yesterday afternoon Mr. Cressy, in secret, paid to Señor Rodriguez, fifty thousand dollars in American gold, the first of four payments of similar sums. This gold was to have been shipped to Philadelphia by express to-day to catch a steamer for Venezuela."

Mr. Grimm nodded. "The fact that this gold was in Señor Rodriguez's possession could not have been known to more than half a dozen persons, as the negotiations throughout have been in strict secrecy," and Mr. Campbell smiled benignly. "So much! Now, Señor Rodriguez has just telephoned asking that I send a man to the legation at once. The gold was kept there over night or perhaps I should say that the senior intended to keep it there over night." Mr. Campbell stared at Mr. Grimm for a moment, then: "Miss Thorne, you know, is a guest at the legation, that is why I am referring the matter to you."

"I understand," said Mr. Grimm. And ten minutes later Mr. Grimm presented himself to Señor Rodriguez. The minister from Venezuela, bubbling with excitement, was pacing forth and back across his office, ruffling his gray-black hair with nervous, twining fingers. Mr. Grimm sat down. "Señor," he inquired placidly, "fifty thousand dollars in gold would weigh nearly two hundred pounds, wouldn't it?"

Señor Rodriguez stared at him blankly. "Si, Señor," he agreed absently. And then, in English: "Yes, I should imagine so."

"Well, was all of it stolen, or only a part of it?" Mr. Grimm went on.

The minister gazed into the listless eyes for a time, then, apparently bewildered, walked forth and back across the room again. Finally he sat down. "All of it," he admitted. "I can't understand it. No one, not a soul in this house, except myself, knew it was here."

"In addition to this weight of, say two hundred pounds, fifty thousand dollars would make considerable bulk," mused Mr. Grimm. "Very well! Therefore it would appear that the person, or persons, who got it must have gone away from here heavily laden?"

Señor Rodriguez nodded. "And now, Señor," Mr. Grimm continued, "if you will kindly state the circumstances immediately preceding and following the theft?"

A slight frown which had been growing upon the smooth brow of the diplomatist was instantly dissipated.

"The money—fifty thousand dollars in gold coin—was paid to me yesterday afternoon about four o'clock," he began slowly, in explanation.

"By Mr. Cressy of the International Investment Company," supplemented Mr. Grimm. "Yes, go on."

"The gentleman who paid the money remained here from four until nine o'clock while I, personally, counted it. As I counted it I placed it in canvas bags and when he had gone I took these bags from this room into that," he indicated a closed door to his right, "and personally stowed them away in the safe. I closed and locked the door of the safe myself; I know that it was locked. And that's all, except this morning the money was gone—every dollar of it."

"Safe blown?" inquired Mr. Grimm. "No, Señor!" exclaimed the diplomatist with sudden violence. "No, the safe was not blown! It was closed and locked, exactly as I had left it!"

Mr. Grimm was idly twisting the seal ring on his little finger.

"Just as I left it!" Señor Rodriguez repeated excitedly. "Last night after I locked the safe door I tried it to make certain that it was locked. I happened to notice then that the pointer on the dial had stopped precisely at number forty-five. This morning, when I unlocked the safe—and, of course, I didn't know then that the money had been taken—the pointer was still at number forty-five."

He paused with one hand in the air; Mr. Grimm continued to twist the seal ring.

"It was all like—like some trick on the stage," the minister went on, "like the magician's disappearing lady, or—or—I! It was as though I had not put the money into the safe at all!"

"Did you?" inquired Mr. Grimm amiably.

"Did I?" blazed Señor Rodriguez. "Why, Señor—I! I did!" he concluded meekly.

Mr. Grimm believed him.

"Who else knows the combination of the safe?" he queried.

"No one, Señor—not a living soul."

"Your secretary, for instance?"

"Not even my secretary."

"Some servant—some member of your family?"

"I tell you, Señor, not one person in all the world knew that combination except myself," Señor Rodriguez insisted.

"Your secretary—a servant—some member of your family might have seen you unlock the safe some time, and thus learned the combination?"

Señor Rodriguez did not quite know whether to be annoyed at Mr. Grimm's persistence, or to admire the tenacity with which he held to this one point.

"You must understand, Señor Grimm, that many state documents are kept in the safe," he said finally, "therefore it is not advisable that any one should know the combination. I have made it an absolute rule, as did my predecessors here, never to unlock the safe in the presence of another person."

"State documents!" Mr. Grimm's lips silently repeated the words. Then aloud: "Perhaps there's a record of the combination somewhere? If you had died suddenly, for instance, how would the safe have been opened?"

"There would have been only one way, Señor—blow it open. There is no record."

"Well, if we accept all that as true," observed Mr. Grimm musingly, "it would seem that you either didn't put the money into the safe at all, or—please sit down, there's nothing personal in this—or else the money was taken out of the safe without it being unlocked. This last would have been a miracle, and this is not the day of miracles, therefore—"

Mr. Grimm's well modulated voice trailed off into silence. Señor Rodriguez came to his feet, with a blaze of anger in his eyes; Mr. Grimm was watching him curiously.

"I understand, Señor," said the minister deliberately, "that you believe that I—"

"I believe that you have told the truth," interrupted Mr. Grimm placidly, "that is the truth so far as you know it. But you have stated one thing in error. Somebody besides yourself does know the combination. Whether they knew it or not at this time yesterday I can't say, but somebody knows it now."

Señor Rodriguez drew a deep breath of relief. The implied accusation had been withdrawn as pleasantly and frankly as it had been put forward.

"I ran across a chap in New York once, for instance," Mr. Grimm took the trouble to explain, "who could unlock any safe—that is, any safe of the kind used at that time—twelve or fourteen years ago. So you see, I doubt if he would be so successful with the new models, with all their improvements, but then—I! You know he would have made an ideal burglar, that chap. Now, Señor, who lives here in the legation with you?"

"My secretary, Señor Diaz, my daughter Inez, and just at the moment, a Miss Thorne—Miss Isabel Thorne," the senior informed him. "Also four servants—two men and two women."

"I've had the pleasure of meeting your daughter and Miss Thorne," Mr. Grimm informed him. "Now, suppose we take a look at the safe?"

"Certainly."

Señor Rodriguez started toward the closed door just as there came a timid knock from the hall. He glanced at Mr. Grimm, who nodded, then he called:

"Come in!"

The door opened, and Miss Thorne entered. She was clad in some filmy, gossamer-like morning gown with her radiant hair caught upon her white neck. At sight of Mr. Grimm the blue-gray eyes opened as if in surprise, and she paused irresolutely.

"I beg your pardon, Señor," she said, addressing the diplomatist. "I did not know you were engaged. And Mr. Grimm!" She extended a slim, white hand, and the young man bowed low over it. "We are old friends," she explained, smilingly, to the minister. Then: "I think I must have dropped my handkerchief when I was in here yesterday with Inez. Perhaps you found it?"

"Si, Señora," replied Señor Rodriguez gallantly. "It is on my desk in here. Just a moment."

He opened the door and passed into the adjoining room. Mr. Grimm's eyes met those of Miss Isabel Thorne, and there was no listlessness in them now, only interest. She smiled at him tauntingly and lowered her lids. Señor Rodriguez appeared from the other room with the handkerchief.

"Mil gracias, Señor," she thanked him.

"No hay de que, Señora," he returned, as he opened the door for her.

"Monsieur Grimm, au revoir!" She dropped a little curtsy, and still smiling, went out.

"She is charming, Señor," the diplomatist assured him enthusiastically, albeit irrelevantly. "Such vivacity, such personality, such—such—she is charming."

"The safe, please," Mr. Grimm reminded him.

A few minutes delay in treating some cases of croup, even the length of time it takes to go for a doctor often proves dangerous. The safest way is to keep Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and at the first indication of croup give the child a dose. Pleasant to take and always cures. Sold by All Dealers.

AN EASY AND HARMLESS WAY TO DARKEN THE HAIR.

Who does not know of the value of sage and sulphur for keeping the hair dark, soft, glossy and in good condition? As a matter of fact, sulphur is a natural element of hair, and a deficiency of it in the hair is held by many scalp specialists to be connected with loss of color and vitality of the hair. Unquestionably, there is no better remedy for hair and scalp troubles, especially premature grayness, than sage and sulphur, if properly prepared. The Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, put up an ideal preparation of this kind, called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur. It is sold by all leading druggists for 50c. and $1.00 a bottle, or is sent direct by the manufacturers upon receipt of price.

WISH LOT SALE SUCCESS.

Greensburg News: Rushville capitalists are organizing to float a $50,000 furniture factory. They propose to purchase a large tract of land and divide the same into lots which will sell for $150 cash and $160 on time. In this manner a sufficient sum will be raised to locate and promote the new industry. Their idea is to have only local capital in the deal and thus make it a business that must necessarily benefit only local people. The proposition is a good one and we trust that our sister city on the north is successful in establishing the factory.

board a car for Indianapolis when young Miller stepped up to him and in a most casual and matter-of-fact way said: "You'd better go and carry Pap's route for him in the morning. We had a quarrel this evening and I don't think he'll be able to go out on the route in the morning."

Mr. Palmerton, who is somewhat deaf, did not attach any meaning to the words and probably did not hear enough of what was said to take any alarm, for he merely replied "Well" and boarded the car.

Fortunately, however, others had heard, and they went at once to the home of the Postmaster John Jackson and acquainted him with the incident. Mr. Jackson led a party at once to the Miller home and there they found the aged man lying on the kitchen floor unconscious and his life blood oozing away. Though his neck and face bore many gaping wounds none of the gashes had been deep enough to touch a vital spot and none of the larger blood vessels had been severed. The most dangerous looking wound was across the front of the neck and it appeared that a direct attempt to cut the throat had been made. The helpless man's eyes were swollen shut and his head appeared almost like it had been reduced to a pulp so bloody were his features. His hair was also matted with blood and great clots of it covered the kitchen floor. Indressing the wounds the physicians took more than fifty stitches. Mr. Miller was not allowed to talk at any length but the few statements he made cleared the situation.

Mr. Miller has two daughters living in Wisconsin. Both are paying for farms they recently purchased and he has been in the habit of aiding them financially. The son knew this and Sunday evening as the two sat talking in the kitchen the boy began to complain that his father was giving the girls more money than they were entitled to. The father explained that he was not in reality giving them the money as they were issuing receipts to him showing the share each was receiving and which they regarded as nothing more than a loan. The son demanded the receipts and they were shown to him. Then he demanded that he be given a sum of money as large as the total of the receipts issued by one of the daughters. Of course, the father refused. Then came the unexpected murderous attack and the aged man knew no more until restored to consciousness.

Thoroughly aroused by the terrible crime numerous citizens of the town set out to look for the son, but he had disappeared and no one saw him after his conversation with Mr. Palmerton at the traction station. The police force here were notified to be on the lookout for the fugitive and the officers watched all cars and all trains throughout the night, but failed to find him. All other surrounding towns and cities were notified and it is likely that he will soon be taken.

Not long ago the young man was the subject of many stories in the press of the cities in this section of the State on account of a sudden and unexplained disappearance from his home. All sorts of theories were advanced to account for his disappearance and it was finally decided he had gone wild and was roaming about the country. Wild man stories became as plentiful as grasshoppers in the late summer months and Miller was searched for here, there and everywhere by organized posses. He was "seen" in many places but never captured. Then one day he came back to his father's home and explained that he had been over in Ohio visiting relatives. His disappearance at that time was due to a quarrel with his father because he refused him money.
